SDJR 2.

This is Bath Road Viaduct, Shepton Mallet, taken from the north side. It shows the town through the arches including the gasometer. This gasometer was built in 1887. The viaduct is in its single line phase, being doubled in 1892. Looking at weather reports for that period, there is only one big snow event in this area, from 9th to 13th March 1891. So I say that this image was taken in mid March 1891.

SDJR 12.

We cannot accurately date this other than to say it is circa 1891. It shows a train of S&D suffixed coaches posed on the exit from the S&D Goods Yard at Wells and facing towards Glastonbury. The S&D Wells (Bristol & Exeter designed) signal box is at left and the lines curving from that towards us go to the S&D Station at Priory Road, behind the photographer. The lines from the GWR Station at Tucker Street appear curving under the train to join the S&D lines before continuing through the S&D station into the East Somerset Railway Station.

Loco 53 was built in 1885 and re-boilered by 1905. All the coaches are likely to have had the suffix around 1885/6, when replacement coaches with these numbers were built. The design of all of them suggest they were built circa 1875, but we have no firm information on that period. They are all lit by oil pot lamps. They are all similar lengths, ranging from the 3 compartment 1st No. 2A of 23 feet, to the two 3rd brake coaches, Nos 10A and 4A, of about 25 feet.

As to this image of Mail Van No. 42, it was built at Derby (Lot 158, Drawing 717, 17.11.1887). It is thought that two were ordered and that the other might have been No. 41. I am indebted to Russ Garner for this, as he had been in contact about all things S&D with Brian Radford some years ago. The only known photo of this style of van in service is in an image I picked up at Covent Garden Market many years ago, showing it in a train at Evercreech New. Looking at the image enlarged, I see that the builder's plate is a classic M.Ry.Co. / BUILDERS / DERBY / 1889. I think that is the date I see. The axle boxes (grease?) are lettered S&DJR 8A. A little wrinkle – the guard's lock was lower on Midland stock than on S&D stock – the latter being level with half way up the droplight frame. This van was lit by 2 oil pot lamps, one for the Guard and one for the mail – I am looking for two of these to complete the set of five on our Midland coach we are restoring in Somerset. Judging by the state of dirt, I would guess this was photographed around the turn of the century. The lettering is as for passenger stock, shaded right and below We do not know when it was withdrawn from service.

As to its location, it is just outside Bath Green Park Station with the engine sheds in the background. Far right is the stone built Midland engine shed, between that and the van can be seen the wooden S&D engine shed and to the left of the van is the S&D Coaling Stage. The 3 plank open looks like an S&D wagon, as the builder's plate has scalloped corners and is like the Highbridge works plates. Not sure why Channen is chalked on the side – perhaps a piece worker having loaded this wagon?

Loco 27A. In this state, it shows the original conversion from an 1861 George England built 2-4-0 tender engine No. 7, (renumbered 27 in 1876 and 27A in 1881) to a 2-4-0T, which happened in May 1888. It had a new boiler, with the dome moving to the front boiler ring in July 1902. There were several turntables on the S&D, Bath, Evercreech Junction, Templecombe, Wimborne, Branscombe and Highbridge. I favour Wimborne, but am awaiting help from someone else. It looks like an early turntable and I have not yet found out when that one was replaced. Later images at all sites have handrails around the pits. As the build plate on the rear of the cab looks so new, I would favour a date of mid 1888 for this, although I suppose it could have been cleaned for the photographer's benefit.

SDJR 007,

Loco 15. This was originally built in 1866 by Vulcan Foundry as No. 19. It was renumbered 15 in either February 1871 or June 1873. It was later renumbered 15A in May 1891, so this photo pre-dates that. It had been reboilered in 1881 and later was fitted with vacuum braking, as seen in this image. I don't know when 'later' was. So I would suggest that this image may well have been taken at the same time as No. 27A and on the same turntable, approximately 40 feet in diameter.

SDJR 008 Also loco 15 (and not No. 16 as in your list), but built by May 1891 (hence the one above being suffixed) at Derby. It is in its 'as built; state and I would guess it has just been built, as it is in 'photographic' grey. I think it is on the lines east of Highbridge Station with the Works/Engine shed lines in the foreground. Given the shunter's pole lying between the nearby tracks, I assume it has just been hauled/pushed into place. A higher resolution image would probably show the builder's plate on the smokebox saddle reading 'MIDLAND Ry. Co. / BUILDERS / DERBY 1891'

SDJR 009 Loco No. 19 (and not No. 16 as in your list) was completed in March 1874 by J. Fowler & Co. It was reboilered in May 1888 and appears to be captured on film around that time. It is awaiting the covers for the safety valves and the dome. It has the new cast brass number plate unlike the other five members of this class, which had brass numerals only. It looks like it was positioned at Highbridge but a little further west than No. 15 above, as a similar pile of stones in front of the middle driving wheel appear to the left of No. 15's bogie. However, the track looks to have been re-laid between this photo and that of No. 15. I will try to find out if Highbridge Works had any trackwork done in that period.
